

5-10 June

Rhymes mini-festival is a platform for a queer understanding of poetry in performance art. Rhymes focuses on new practices that expand articulation as a versatile praxis and searches for the poetic on how it is perceived, performed, created or shared with an audience. Shifting between using rhymes as soundscapes, as material, as riddles and as dialogues, it creates settings for the body to expand its modes of coexisting. Including performances, classes, open discussions, poetry readings, film screenings, it invites the audience to reflect on different ways of processing poetry and relating to the poetic body.
